A REVAMPED CALIFORNIA BUNGALOW

TIMELESS APPEAL

For this project, Nick Kirou from KPS Interiors renovated his 1920s period home to give it modern flair while still maintaining its traditional feel. The existing high ornate ceilings were integral to the new design so Kirou ensured all the cornices had the same beautiful patterns as the rest of the existing home.

As part of the remodel, Kirou removed the kitchen's archway and dropped the wall's bulkhead, which originally closed the space off from the rest of the living areas. This opened up the kitchen, giving it a brighter, more contemporary feel.

An abundance of storage, including an appliance cupboard, was installed to improve the kitchen's functionality. Kirou also sourced tapware, glass splashbacks and a neutral colour palette to refresh the space and uphold the home's heritage.

An extra ensuite was added to the home as part of the remodel, which also includes high ornate ceilings, decorative cornices and traditional tapware and accessories. These features combined with an antique mirror and travertine tiles ensured the bathroom was elegant despite the modern shower and double vanity.
